

Clement Cano holds a degree in music from San Jose State University studying voice from Professor Joseph Frank and is currently pursuing a Masters in Music Education. He is currently a Music Teacher at Pacific Collegiate School in Santa Cruz. As well as teaching, Mr. Cano has accompanied and directed several church choirs in the San Jose dioceses and was just appointed Music Director at St. Joseph's Cathedral. He started singing in choirs in 1991 with Saringhimig under the direction of George Hernandez. In 1995 he joined the San Jose State University Choraliers under the direction of Dr. Charlene Archibeque where he also served as a section leader and assistant student conductor. He has traveled and performed at regional and national American Choral Directors' Association conferences as well as international festivals and choral competitions throughout many countries in Europe. In his spare time Mr. Cano nerds out on Disney, Marvel, Stranger Things, and cooking videos. Having played ice hockey for almost as long as singing in choirs, Mr. Cano is still happy to have all his teeth!
